

Dear Friends,

This has been an unprecedented year in our nation and an extremely challenging year for many public health organizations; including the American Cancer Society.

San Diego is one of the top three cities for cancer research in the United States and in the biotech world. Our city is famous for its work in oncology, and many new cutting-edge ideas in basic science and treatment have been developed right here in San Diego. The American Cancer Society has funded more than 726 research projects totaling $120,243,192 since 1962!

Now, more than ever, we need your support to ensure that vital cancer research continues and that cancer patients receive the critical support they need.

With 40 out of 100 men, and 38 out of 100 women being diagnosed with cancer in their lifetime, we know that all of us have been touched by cancer in some way.

Your continued support will ensure that the American Cancer can continue its important work of finding a cure to cancer in our lifetime.

Thank you!
